

The affect of taking away an established alternative of which radio station to pick would be wide spread. The resistance to the new LPFM stations has more to do with than simply a refusal to conform to change. It deals simply with the old adage, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

Everyone has a favorite radio station. (Or several.) And the knowledge that they can be replaced with new stations with formats that I've yet to see is rather disheartening.

Is there any way to ensure that existing local radio stations will be allowed to continue? As well as national stations that are both national and regional broadcasters? I only ask that considerations be taken into perspective, seeing that there are several formats that are already established, accepted, and loved by the listeners.

Thank you for your time,
Antonette Dorado